Profile

Dan Winckler is a performing artist and teacher of improvisational theater, networked collaboration and new media performance. Most recently, he studied and researched at the Integrated Digital Media Institute of Polytechnic University, Brooklyn, where he initiated an international collaboration between the University and Dutch new media organizations in the Kids Connect program. He is a board member of SHARE, a not-for-profit support organization for audio, visual and new media artists. Previously, he devoted himself to improv and sketch comedy, live visual performance and video art, while delving into improvisational cinematography, editing, webcasting, web programming, graphic design, and community support and fundraising. He performs with the improv group Gunshow and has also worked with the ground-breaking video improv groups Neutrino and Improv Everywhere. He holds an M.S. in Integrated Digital Media from Polytechnic University and a B.A. in Literary and Cultural Studies from the The College of William and Mary. He is from Texas, Virginia, Belgium and New York.
